CHAIR'S NOTE

If you haven't looked at our website recently, you may not have seen some of our new features. Under research we have added links to recent work by members. Do let me know of recent articles you have published. Also we have listed the criteria by which winners of our competitions are selected as well as the committee chairs and members serving on each committee.

In Atlanta in August of this year we'll be visible in several sections, including one that ASA normally has dedicated to the sociology of the AIDS. Our business meeting has been booked, and once ASA gives us a time, I will post it on our web page. At the business meeting we'll announce winners of our three competitions. Information about applying for these awards will be on the web page soon and links to flyers for you to share with your students and colleagues.

Dues for 2010 have been due since January, so if you haven't sent yours to Carrie Foote (foote@iupui.edu) yet, please do so. We still offer one year, three year and life-time renewal options. Part of the funds we collect are used for the awards to our competition winners. And we do have modest refreshments at our business meetings. If you are not sure you are current, do send Carrie an email.

For 2011, ASA has given SAN permission to have a session, at which we'll be able to present four speakers. Do let me have your suggestions for people you'd like to hear.

Please let me have any suggestions about directions SAN might take, so that we become an even better clearinghouse for our members' research.

Thanks,

Terry Labov, Chair, Sociologists' AIDS Network
(labov@sas.upenn.edu)

The Sociologists AIDS' Network proudly announces its three competitions for 2010: a graduate student paper award, a scholarly activity award, and an award for career contributions to the field. All nominations and submissions are due May 14, 2010. See below for additional details.

2010 AWARD FOR CAREER CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE SOCIOLOGY OF HIV/AIDS

This award honors outstanding contributions to the Sociology of HIV/AIDS. The award may recognize work that has significantly advanced our understanding of social aspects of the pandemic, or that has contributed to prevention, treatment, or policy interventions. Nominees should have pursued substantial research and/or applied work related to HIV/AIDS, and should have worked in the field for at least eight years. Nominations (of yourself or others) should include a statement of up to two pages about the nominee's qualifications and an electronic copy or web link to her/his CV. Nominations (and questions) should be submitted to the committee chair, Sherry Larkins, at slarkins@mindspring.com (attachments in .doc or .pdf format only, please) by May 14, 2010. Scholars who have been nominated before will be automatically re-considered this year, but nominators should feel free to submit additional materials.

2010 SCHOLARLY ACTIVITY AWARD

The SAN Scholarly Activity Award aims to nurture scholarly interest in the sociology of HIV/AIDS by supporting the work of emerging scholars in the field. One applicant will be chosen each year to receive a one-time award of up to $250 and a year of free membership in SAN. All graduate students working on topics in the sociology of HIV/AIDS are eligible to apply. Supportable activities include, but are not limited to, research expenses (incentives, transcription, copying) and conference travel. Applicants should submit the following items to the award committee chair, Jorge Fontdevila (jfontdevila@fullerton.edu), by May 14, 2010: (1) A letter of recommendation from your faculty advisor; (2) A project proposal of 2-4 pages, including a description of the research, how your activity contributes to the sociology of AIDS, and descriptions of how the funds will be used and when the activity will be completed, and (3) A complete budget for your conference travel, research project or other scholarly activity (including other funding applications).

2010 MARTIN LEVINE STUDENT ESSAY COMPETITION

Sociology students are invited to submit an original, 20-page (double-spaced) essay on the social dimensions of HIV/AIDS for the annual student essay competition. The topic is broadly defined and can include any aspect of HIV/AIDS from a sociological perspective. The student must be the first author and must have written most, if not all, of the manuscript. The deadline for submission is May 14, 2010. The winner will receive an award of $100 and a five-year membership to SAN. All students who enter the competition will also receive a one year membership to SAN. Papers should be submitted by e-mail to Terence McDonnell (terence.e.mcdonnell@vanderbilt.edu).

SAN MEMBERS' ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Recent News, Research, Grants, and Publications:

Barry Adam is currently serving as a PI (or Co-PI) on the following studies: (1) "A Small-Group Intervention to Reduce HIV Sexual Transmission Risk Behaviour Among HIV-Positive Men Who Have Sex With Men" funded by the Canadian Institutes for Health Research; (2) "Linking Molecular and Social Cluster Analyses in HIV Transmission: Phase 1 project" funded by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research; and (3) "Impacts of criminal prosecutions for HIV exposure and transmission on people living with HIV" funded by the Ontario HIV Treatment Network.

Valerio Baćak was recently awarded a three-year International Fulbright Science and Technology Award to study for a Ph.D. at a U.S. university. Valerio's research proposal examined how large scale social processes affect social networks and how potential disruptions in these networks influence people's AIDS-related health behavior. RESEARCH PROFILES

Nicole Angotti, Ph.D. Candidate

Department of Sociology, University of Texas at Austin

Dissertation: Testing Differences: The Implementation of Western HIV Testing Norms in sub-Saharan Africa

This dissertation considers how – and with what success – Western public health interventions are incorporated in non-Western societies. Focusing on Malawi, a high HIV prevalence, rural African setting, this research investigates the implementation of HIV counseling and testing ("HIV testing"), a key strategy developed for the prevention (and treatment) of HIV in the West, and later institutionalized globally and exported to other, very different parts of the world. The empirical object of study is the "3C's," the globally-endorsed Western norms upon which testing rest: (1) that testing includes counseling, (2) that testing be conducted with informed consent, and (3) that the test result be confidential. Employing various methods of field research, this project considers the differential incorporation of the 3C's in Malawi from the perspectives of the various social and institutional actors who inform the testing encounter: international and national elites, HIV counselors, and rural Malawian men and women. Specifically, this research asks: have HIV testing norms (3C's) been transformed from their Western design as they are implemented in sub-Saharan Africa; if so, by whom, in what ways, and at what cost(s) for HIV prevention and treatment? Because there is less cultural, institutional, and practical support in Malawi for counseling, and for voluntary and confidential encounters than in the West where testing norms originated, implementation of the 3C's may lead to unintended consequences and consequently, far less program success than anticipated.

William M. Darrow, Ph.D.

Department of Health Promotion and Disease Prevention, Florida International University

While serving as the 86th president of the American Sociological Association (1994-95), Amitai Etzioni called a meeting of sociologists to formulate plans for a more effective response to the HIV/AIDS pandemic. Judy Auerbach, Sam Friedman, Heather Turner, and other members of the Sociological AIDS Network contributed to the discussions. I came away from that meeting energized with ideas for mounting a more effective response to the problems of HIV prevention being confronted in south Florida, my new home. Five years later, my Public Health colleagues and I poured our ideas into a competitive grant application and were fortunate to receive a cooperative agreement from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to eliminate disparities in HIV disease among Black and Hispanic 18-39 year-old residents of Broward County by 2010.

Our grant money ran out in 2008, but my students and I continue to report on our Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health (REACH) 2010 demonstration project. An article to be published this spring shows how HIV-incidence rates among Black young adults in Broward County have been cut in half since our work began in early 1999, and how HIV-incidence rates among Hispanic young adults are now virtually identical with those in the White population. For further information about this forthcoming article and other peer-review publications, please visit our REACH 2010 website, www.fiu.edu/~reach/, or contact me at darroww@fiu.edu.

Claire Laurier Decoteau, Ph.D.
Department of Sociology, University of Illinois at Chicago

Dissertation: The Bio-Politics of HIV/AIDS in Post-Apartheid South Africa

The central thesis of this dissertation is that the discourses attempting to frame the HIV/AIDS epidemic, as well as the dominant health policies in South Africa, have failed to account for the socio-economic conditions, the healing ideologies and itineraries, and the sexual practices of South Africans most affected by the pandemic. Drawing on extensive ethnographic field work conducted in Johannesburg's squatter camps, the project explores the way in which people combine indigenous and biomedical healing.

Biomedical and 'traditional' healing assume contradictory ontologies of the body and are situated within competing institutional frameworks. Further, public sphere discourses insist upon their radical incommensurability. The primary question motivating this research is, then, why do South Africans deeply affected by HIV/AIDS utilize traditional and biomedical forms of healing simultaneously, and without experiencing any sense of incongruity? The project deploys Pierre Bourdieu's concepts of field, capital and habitus to explore the puzzling way in which people combine multiple healing strategies despite the bifurcated nature of the field of health. In so doing, it analyzes the effect of neoliberal economic restructuring on peoples' health-seeking behavior, the symbolic struggle over the signification of HIV/AIDS ravaging South Africa's public sphere, the relationship between local and global conceptualizations of disease, and the way in which subjects' hybrid health itineraries are stimulating shifts in the configuration of gender, sexuality, and race politics. For example, though it is well documented that South Africa's poor engage in sexual survival tactics that put them at greater risk of HIV infection (tactics which make women particularly vulnerable), the dissertation argues that these sexual practices are not simply survival strategies, but are intimately related to peoples' beliefs about gender relations as well as their corporeal ontologies – both of which are informed by indigenous knowledge systems. In the end, the dissertation argues that HIV-infected Black South Africans have incorporated a culturally hybrid identity which allows them to navigate the symbolic, spiritual and material boundaries that circumscribe daily life in South Africa's shanty towns. By analyzing the specific impact the AIDS pandemic has had on poor communities in South Africa, more general conclusions can be drawn about the limitations of international models of care and prevention, the impact of neo-liberal economic restructuring on the ability of communities in the global south to access health care and sustain a healthy lifestyle, and the importance of collaboration between indigenous and biomedical forms of healing.

Matt G. Mutchler, Ph.D.
Department of Sociology, California State University, Dominguez Hills

Dr. Matt G. Mutchler is currently working on two sociological studies of HIV risk with young gay men. One study currently is funded by NIDA to explore how substances become associated with sex among African American and Latino young gay and bisexual men. This study, which has completed collection of formative data and is now in the main phase, is funded by the National Institutes on Drug Abuse. It utilizes multiple methods including a brief survey, interviews and peer ethnography. A second study, Gay Boy Talk, was funded by the California HIV/AIDS Research Program as well as the Legacy Fund at California State University Dominguez Hills (CSUDH). This study is the first to examine how young gay men discuss sexual health topics with their best friends. Dr. Mutchler is interested in working with SAN students and Faculty in forming a committee to support sociologists who are seeking federal funding for research studies. If you are interested in helping with this committee, please contact him at mmutchler@csudh.edu.

Thomas M. Painter, Ph.D.

Division of HIV/AIDS Prevention, National Center for HIV/AIDS, Viral Hepatitis, STD, and TB Prevention

Two of the articles listed above under “Member Accomplishments” (Wilton et al. 2009; Diallo et al. 2010) report the results from two of three CDC-funded projects to support efforts by community-based organizations (CBOs) and research partners if needed, to evaluate HIV prevention interventions that the CBOs had developed for high-risk minority populations with substantial input from their served communities, that the CBOs believed to be both innovative relative to other interventions for similar populations, and effective, but had never had an opportunity to rigorously evaluate.

The CDC Innovative Interventions project funded CBOs to evaluate their interventions for African American women in Metro-Atlanta, African American men who have sex with other men in the New York City area, and incarcerated, largely minority adolescent males in Philadelphia. All of the evaluations assessed the efficacy of the interventions based on self-reports of behavioral outcomes by evaluation participants.

The results of the third evaluation, of a theater-based intervention for incarcerated minority adolescents in Philadelphia, and a fourth paper that describes lessons learned from the project overall by the CBOs, their research partners, and CDC, will be published by AIDS Education and Prevention in September-October 2010.

SAN members who wish to obtain copies of these publications are invited to contact Tom Painter, Prevention Research Branch, Division of HIV/AIDS Prevention, NCHHSTP, CDC. E-mail: tcp2@cdc.gov

UPCOMING CONFERENCES

The Joint Annual Meeting of the Midwest Sociological Society (MSS) and the North Central Sociological Association (NCSA) will be held March 31 – April 3, 2010 at the Chicago Marriott Downtown Magnificent Mile, Chicago, Illinois. The meeting theme is, “Communities in an Age of Social Transformation.” The final program is available on the web at: www.themss.org or www.ncsanet.org (see below for additional information).

The Pacific Sociological Association (PSA) Annual Meeting will be held April 8 – 11, 2010 at the Marriott Oakland City Center, Oakland, California. The meeting theme is “Revitalizing the Sociological Imagination: Individual Troubles and Social Issues in a Turbulent World.” The preliminary program is available online at: www.pacificsoc.org (see below for additional information).

XVIII INTERNATIONAL AIDS CONFERENCE

July 18 – 23, 2010, Vienna Austria

Conference Overview (from www.aids2010.org):

The International AIDS Conference is the premier gathering for those working in the field of HIV, as well as policy makers, persons living with HIV and other individuals committed to ending the pandemic. It is a chance to assess where we are, evaluate recent scientific developments and lessons learnt, and collectively chart a course forward.

Given the 2010 deadline for universal access set by world leaders, AIDS 2010 will coincide with a major push for expanded access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support. With a global economic crisis threatening to undermine public investments, the conference will help keep HIV on the front burner, and is a chance to demonstrate the importance of continued HIV investments to broader health and development goals. AIDS 2010 is also an opportunity to highlight the critical connection between human rights and HIV; a dialogue begun in earnest in Mexico City in 2008. The selection of the AIDS 2010 host city is a reflection of the central role Vienna has played in bridging Eastern and Western Europe, and will allow for an examination of the epidemic's impact in Eastern Europe.

The AIDS 2010 programme will present new scientific knowledge and offer many opportunities for structured dialogue on the major issues facing the global response to HIV. A variety of session types – from abstract-driven presentations to symposia, bridging sessions and plenaries – will meet the needs of various participants. Other related activities, including the Global Village, satellite meetings, exhibitions and affiliated events, will contribute to an exceptional opportunity for professional development and networking. Following the success of the pilot programme at AIDS 2008, the XVIII International AIDS Conference will provide or facilitate hubs (centres) where selected sessions of the conference will be screened, to increase the access to the conference programme.

SAN MENTORING PROGRAM

Graduate and undergraduate students doing research on AIDS-related topics often have difficulty finding faculty mentors who understand and are interested in their topics. Students looking for contact with knowledgeable faculty who can help them are encouraged to e-mail Howard Lune (hlune@hunter.cuny.edu) with a brief summary of their research. Faculty willing to informally mentor a student should contact Howard as well; he will coordinate finding appropriate mentors for each student from among the volunteers.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The current balance of the SAN account (as of February 1, 2010) is $3,885.91. Thank you very much to the members who have already paid their 2009 and 2010 dues. If you have not already paid your dues for last year or this year, please send them in with the form included in this newsletter or on-line via the website. Feel free to contact me at foote@iupui.edu if you have any questions about this report or the state of SAN's finances.

STAY IN TOUCH WITH SAN

Do you have a new publication, grant, project, or major recognition or award that focuses on HIV related issues or your accomplishments? If so, please send us details so we can keep members informed about current research and achievements of SAN members. E-mail your information to the SAN Newsletter Editor, Christie A. Sennott, (Christie.sennott@colorado.edu) or Chair, Terry Labov, (labov@sas.upenn.edu). Additionally, if you change jobs, schools, etc., and wish to remain a part of the SAN network, please be sure to send an e-mail with your new contact information to Carrie Foote, (foote@iupui.edu) so we can keep your information current. Thank you!
